THE WALWORTH TRAGEDY.

Manfred Tracy Walworth was thrown into the society of his step-sisters, after his father's marriage to the widow of Col. Harden, and without the idea occurring to her seniors that they would ever dream of being anything near to one another than brother and sister. Mrs. Walworth was a strict Catholic, and the marriage between the young people would have been extremely distasteful to her, since, in the views of that church, this relationship by her new marriage was such as to forbid the forming of closer ties; but the young people knew nothing of these ecclesiastical regulations, and cared little for what the passion after awhile absorbed their reason.

Then they secretly plighted the truth to each other, and took up the relation of man and wife. A few brief months of wild happiness followed. As was inevitable, the secret exposed itself, when the betrothed was evidently about to become a mother. Then a scene of reprobation followed. The young couple made the excuse that they had promised themselves to each other, and recognized one another by solemn words of agreement between themselves as man and wife, and that this agreement, according to civil law, was marriage. There was then but one recourse left, and that was to make the best of an unhappy passion, and unite them by formal ceremony of the church. To this cheerful assent was given, and it was accordingly done. The marriage that had become a necessity was formally solemnized, and three months after Frank H. Walworth was born.

As might be expected, when the passion cooled the couple looked upon each other with changed eyes, and each came to think that their choice would have been different had they not been thrown together in a common household. Hence it happened that they quarreled, and finally separated. Each was jealous of the other, and each despised the other for youthful weakness and indiscretion. Letters passed between them containing recriminations, and some of their strange missives came into the possession of the young parolite.

Taunted upon his mother's anger, and there is reason to believe that he totally misunderstood the reflection made on his illegitimacy. He thought his father reflected on his mother's chastity after marriage. Fired with false chivalry, he did not stop to question his mother, and the mother had naturally concealed her weakness from her son. It was enough for him that a star had been cast upon her name and his own. He took his father's life, and thereby published his mother's early frailty to the world. Her best friends lamented this more than the murder for which her son is imprisoned.

SLEEP obtained two hours before midnight, when the negative forces are in operation, is the real high, most recuperative system, giving brightness to the eye and glow to the cheek. The difference in the appearance of a person who habitually retires at ten o'clock and that of one who sits up until twelve, is quite remarkable. The tone of the system, so evident in the complexion, the clearness and sparkle of the eye, and the softness of the skin, are all features in a person of health, kept at "concert pitch" by taking regular rest two hours before twelve o'clock, and thereby obtaining the "beauty sleep" of the night. There is a heaviness of the eye, a sallowness of the skin, and an absence of that glow in the face which renders it fresh in expression, and round in appearance, that really distinguishes the person who keeps late hours.

A waiting match took place the other evening at Eureka, between a couple of gentlemen of that town on a wager of $50. The winner danced three and a half hours, during which he exhausted the dancing powers of two ladies. The other less fortunate contestant tucked four ladies, and was so overcome himself that he could with difficulty maintain an upright position.

MAIMS—Riches abuse them who know not how to use them. He is unworthy to live who lives only for himself. Every man is the architect of his own fortune. No tyrant can take from you your knowledge. Nothing is to be got without pains, except poverty. Deceit is in haste, but honesty can wait a fair leisure. God arms the harmless.

EDMUND C. HUBBEL, of New York City, is probably the fastest compositor (printer) in the country. He recently set in one hour 2,905 ems of solid nonpareil; he has set 20,000 ems in ten hours, and 15,000 is his average day's work.
